The image features three white, three-dimensional ice cubes with black outlines, arranged in a small cluster. The top cube is slightly offset to the left. The two bottom cubes are positioned in front of it, one to the left and one to the right. Each of the three visible faces of the cubes has a light gray, irregular smudge, suggesting they are melting. Below the cubes is a larger, light gray puddle of water, with several smaller, teardrop-shaped droplets scattered around its edges. The entire scene is set against a plain, light gray background. The text 'Ice-breaker' is written in a bold, black, sans-serif font, centered horizontally and partially overlapping the middle of the three cubes.

Personal

Societal

What are values and attitudes?

Social

Human

Personal values are associated with who one is as a person, and how one wishes to define and lead a meaningful life and meet one's goals.

Societal values define the priorities of cultures and societies, the shared principles and guidelines that frame the social order and institutional life. These values endure when they are enshrined in social and institutional structures, documents and democratic practice, and when they are endorsed through public opinion.

What are values and attitudes?

Social values relate to those principles and beliefs that influence the quality of interpersonal relationships. They include how one behaves towards others, and how one manages interactions, including conflict. Social values also reflect cultural assumptions about social well-being, i.e. what makes a community and society work effectively.

Human values have much in common with societal values. However, they are defined as transcending nations and cultures; they apply to the well-being of humanity. These values can be identified across spiritual texts and indigenous traditions spanning generations. They are often articulated in internationally agreed conventions, such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

You and the following people are on a sinking cruise ship that was headed to the Bahamas. As your ship is sinking, you spot an island and believe that you are close enough to reach it in a lifeboat. However, there are 14 of you left alive, but only room for 8 in the lifeboat. Those that go in the lifeboat will probably make it to the island where they will try to survive until they are rescued. Those that are left on the sinking cruise ship will likely go down with the ship and die. You are one of the officers of the cruise ship and the highest ranking survivor. You are given the responsibility of deciding who remains on the ship and who goes aboard the lifeboat.

Protecting Young People

Fraser Guidelines

The young person understands the advice and is mature enough to understand the implications.

The practitioner cannot persuade the young person to inform his or her parents.□

the young person is likely to have sex with or without contraceptives.□

The young person's health is likely to suffer if they do not receive contraceptive advice or treatment.□ It is in the young person's best interest to receive contraceptive advice or treatment without parental consent.

Underage sexual activity guidance

The Sexual Offences Act 2003 recognises that whilst mutually agreed, non-exploitative sexual activity between teenagers does take place and that often no harm comes from it, the age of consent should still remain at 16. This acknowledges that this group of young people is still vulnerable, even when they do not view themselves as such.

Interventions should be aimed at protection of vulnerable children and the provision of information and contraception (where appropriate) for other young people.

Many young people will develop a healthy and developmentally appropriate interest in sexual relationships whilst they are still children and some will do this before they reach the age of consent.

This difference in procedure reflects the position that, whilst sexual activity under 16 remains illegal, young people under the age of 13 are not capable to give consent to such sexual activity.

Gillick Competencies

(Refers to a legal case from the 1980's which looked at whether Doctors should be able to give contraceptive advice or treatment to under 16's, without parental consent)

Gillick competency applies mainly to medical advice but is often used in a wider context to help assess whether a child has the maturity to make their own decisions and to understand the implications of those decisions.

Age, maturity and mental capacity is considered. This is being known as Gillick Competent.□

Ways of supporting young people

Being supportive of young people to learn more about sexual health is not the same as encouraging sexual activity.

Listen to the young person, this sounds simplistic but try to understand their concerns, so you can help and discuss their needs.

As a youth worker you can signpost young people who need extra support.

- Be mindful of cultural, sexual or gender diversity and use appropriate terms and language.

A youth worker is seen as less authoritarian than a parent or a teacher and it is less embarrassing for young people to speak to

A youth worker can unpack some of the attitudes, ideas and messages about sex and sexual health, which may not be relevant to young people today.

Be honest with the young person about what you do or do not know. It is ok to come back to it. This can be learning experiences for both the youth worker and young person. It can also demonstrate to the young person that even adults don't have all the information.

As an information provider, you can ensure young people get the right information and help support them in making their own informed choices about their sexual health.

Support for young people around sexuality LGBTQI+

LGBTQ+ is an acronym that stands for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Trans, Questioning, Plus Sexuality is diverse, and there are many different types. It can take time to figure out the sexuality that the individual feels fits them best. Sexuality can change over time.

Young People may find it difficult to talk about their sexuality and our service can help them alongside other specialist organisations, that support the LGBTQ+ communities

Sexuality is an important part of ourselves. There is no right or wrong, it's about what's right for the individual.

Accessing the Abortion Service choices

There are 3 ways that you can be referred to the Choices clinic at the Chalmers Centre, to discuss unplanned pregnancy/abortion:

- 1. Self referral
If you wish to self refer please call: 0131 536 1070 between the hours of 9am to 3pm Monday to Friday (excluding public holidays). Please ensure you are able to speak privately when you call. You will be asked for some personal details relating to your appointment. Your first appointment is usually a phone consultation, you will then have to attend an appointment at Chalmers Centre, or St John's Hospital if you live in West Lothian.
- 2. GP referral
If you wish to see your GP first then your GP can arrange a referral to the Chalmers Centre, or St Johns Hospital if you live in West Lothian.
- 3. Referral from another clinic within NHS Lothian (e.g. a sexual health clinic)
If you wish to be seen in a sexual health clinic first, you should make an appointment at your nearest clinic and the health care professional there would refer you to the Choices Clinic at the Chalmers Centre, or to St John's Hospital if you live in West Lothian.

If you think you might be pregnant don't delay – contact us or go to your GP as soon as possible. That way you will have more time to make an informed decision.
